

Theme 3: Strandings

Marine mammal stranding data should be integrated with environmental and population dynamic data, as well as terrestrial wildlife and human health data. The proposed marine mammal health mapping tool will enhance the utility of both stranding and environmental data. The rapid exchange of information is critically important. However, the appropriate platform to provide that data needs to be determined.